

American Philosophical Society
Open Access Policy
Effective Date: November 20, 2018

I. Introduction and Open Access Policy Statement

The American Philosophical Society (“APS”) is committed to expanding access to the APS’s significant holdings of primary and secondary materials that are currently available in hard copy only, and that would otherwise require onsite use only, and to creating and preserving digital, archival copies of fragile print resources by encouraging the use of digital copies of these items. The APS is also sensitive to the fact that some of its holdings are subject to the rights of others including copyright, privacy rights, rights of publicity, the rights of Native Peoples, as well as donor and lender restrictions, and other third party obligations. It is the objective of the APS to provide open access to its holdings where possible and to encourage the creation of scholarly works and publication, while respecting copyright law and third party rights, in furtherance of its charitable and educational purposes and in compliance with its obligations as a 501(c)(3) charitable organization.

Through the generosity of donors and in accordance with our mission, where possible, the APS has identified and digitized certain of its holdings that it, in good faith, believes are in the public domain (“Open Access Materials”) and that the APS makes available to you for your limited non-commercial, educational, and scholarly use only as further described below.

While we strive to ensure that Open Access Materials are in the public domain, we cannot and do not warrant or represent that all Open Access Materials are in the public domain or free from third party rights, including, without limitation, copyright, privacy rights, rights of publicity, the rights of Native Peoples, and other restrictions. It is your responsibility to understand whether Open Access Materials are in the public domain and to obtain all appropriate permissions and clearances prior to making use.

This APS Open Access Policy (“Open Access Policy”) governs your use of Open Access Materials and is subject to the APS Terms of Use (the “Terms of Use”), which Terms of Use apply to all text, images, trademarks, data, audio files, video files, software, documentation, metadata and other information that is the property of the APS or its licensors. We may update this Open Access Policy from time to time and when we do we will also update the Effective Date shown above. By accessing, copying, distributing, downloading, printing, or otherwise using Open Access Materials, whether retrieved directly from the APS website or from other sites or mechanisms, you agree to comply with this Open Access Policy and the Terms of Use that are currently in effect.

II. Authorized Uses

You agree that you will limit your use of Open Access Materials to non-commercial, scholarly, educational, personal use, or fair use as defined under United States copyright law, and that you will not violate the APS's or any other party's proprietary rights in the Open Access Materials. You further agree that you will conform your use to the terms of any licenses or restrictions that may apply to Open Access Materials, including, without limitation this Open Access Policy and the Terms of Use.

You may not create a derivative work from Open Access Materials, or sell or license Open Access Materials, without written permission from the APS.

Any commercial use of Open Access Materials is expressly prohibited without written permission from the APS and may be subject to payment of a fee to the APS. To request permission, please contact reference@amphilsoc.org. The APS reserves the right to refuse a request for commercial use of Open Access Materials for any reason at its sole discretion.

III. Proprietary Rights

The APS or the applicable third party retains all rights, including but not limited to copyright, in Open Access Materials. Copyright and other proprietary rights may be held by individuals or entities other than, or in addition to the APS, or may be subject to other licensing terms and agreements between the APS and third parties.

IV. Disclaimer

The APS makes no representations or warranties of any kind regarding whether Open Access Materials are in the public domain or free from other third party rights and restrictions. All Open Access Materials are provided "as is." It is your responsibility to determine if any Open Access Materials are subject to copyright or any other third party rights or restrictions.

V. Crediting Open Access Materials by APS

Except as expressly set forth by the APS herein, in the Terms of Use, or in the APS digital library, you may not use Open Access Materials in a way that implies any endorsement of your publication or project by the APS, or use the APS trademarks without permission. You may not remove any proprietary notices from Open Access Materials or the metadata pertaining to Open Access Materials, including attribution information, credits, and copyright or trademark notices that have been placed on Open Access Materials. All use of Open Access Materials must include any citation information as may be indicated on the APS digital library and at a minimum attribute the APS as: American Philosophical Society.

VI. Takedown Policy

The APS, through its Open Access Policy, is committed to making materials of historic value openly available in the digital library. While the APS strives to ensure that Open Access Materials are in the public domain, in some cases the copyright status to material is ambiguous. Therefore, the APS cannot and does not warrant or represent that all Open Access Materials are in the public domain or free from third party rights, including, without limitation: copyright, privacy rights, rights of publicity, the rights of Native Peoples, and other restrictions. Parties with reason to believe that material in the digital library infringes upon any of the above stated rights, and should therefore not be made publicly available online, should contact the APS at reference@amphilsoc.org. Upon receiving the request, the APS will remove the material from public view until the request is resolved.

When requesting material to be taken down be sure to include:

- Your contact information
- The full URL link to the digital material in question
- Your reason for the request
- An explanation of any claims to the rights of the material

VII. Courtesy Copies

The APS would appreciate receiving a courtesy copy of your scholarly or educational use of any Open Access Materials. Please send digital or print copies to reference@amphilsoc.org.